JAMESTOWN TO SEE UNIVERSITY'S SIRE

FIRST BUILDING OF PENNSYLVANIA UNIVERSITY.

First Building of Pennsylvania's Great Institution of Learning Will Be Shown in Miniature.

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.—The world's newest nation is becoming old enough to possess antique institutions. The University of Pennsylvania is preparing to call attention to this fact by a unique model to be displayed at the Jamestown Exposition. This model will show the first buildings of the university.

The college, which now has buildings covering sixty acres of ground, began in two structures at Fourth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, in 1740. Nine years later Benjamin Franklin, the great American statesman and philosopher, and the founder of the university, published a pamphlet on "Education of Youth in Pennsylvania," which resulted in the foundation of an academy, which began its first session on January 1, 1749. In the building seen on the right in the photograph of the model, which building was originally constructed for a charity school.

In 1753 the trustees secured their first charter for the academy; two years later, by virtue of a second charter, the academy was converted into a college with full power to confer the usual collegiate degrees. The first commencement was held on May 17, 1757, when the degree of bachelor of arts was conferred upon seven students. In 1765 the school of medicine, the first in America, was added to the college. In 1779 all the charter rights and privileges of the college were absorbed by a new organization, called in its charter "The Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania."

These rights were restored ten years later, and in 1791 another charter was granted jointly to the trustees of the charity school and academy, of the university and of the college, under the corporation name of "The Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania," which name it has borne ever since. Its early history was closely associated with the principal events in the history of the colonies and also in the war with Great Britain for independence. In which many of its sons took a leading part. Among the signers of the Declaration of Independence were ten men who were either graduates of the college or among its founders.

TRAIN-ROBBER IS IN PENITENTIARY

Percy Martin, Who Held Up Seaboard Air Line Train, Behind the Bars.

Percy Martin, the man who was recently convicted of holding up and robbing a Seaboard Air Line train in Mecklenburg county on December 30, 1906, was brought to the penitentiary yesterday to serve his term.

Martin gave the officers no trouble on the way, and is behaving himself quite well since his arrival at the State prison.

The train robber was put through the usual course by the penitentiary authorities except his physical examination, which will be made by Dr. Carrington to-morrow.

He will then be assigned to his daily duties, along with the other prisoners.

Don Shackelford and J. Thomas Lawson were brought in yesterday from Southwest Virginia. Shackelford is a youth and was sent down from Scott county for breaking a jail lock and assisting Wes Wilkie, a negro murderer, in making his escape.

Lawson is from Wise county and got five years for killing Joseph Dollarhide. He was for eight years an officer of Wise county, and claims that he did the killing in self-defense. Lawson declares that there was prejudice against him in Wise county, which resulted in his conviction.

The estimate goes on to show the following Baptist churches in Virginia which gave over $500 last year:
